Quebec MP sets sights on animal transport rules

ANIMALS Chickens cannot vote, but a Quebec Liberal MP is rushing to the aid of tired and thirsty livestock on their way to your plate.

"We would like animals in transit from farms to slaughterhouses to be given some sort of respect and comfort until they get to the slaughterhouse," Alexandra Mendes (Brossard-La Prairie) said Thursday of her private member's bill to amend rules on food and water for animals in transit.

Cattle, sheep, goats and other ruminants can be confined on the road for up to 48 hours without any food or water (or 52 hours if they reach their final destination in Canada before then).

Horses, pigs and other animals with only one stomach can be held in the same hungry and thirsty state for no more than 36 hours.

Spirit Halloween store staff Rachel Cere, left, and Jennifer Pierce get into the swing of the season Thursday. The Elgin Street store, one of three in the city, has been packed with shoppers of all ages preparing for Halloween festivities this Saturday. According to Pierce, the most popular costumes this year are Super Mario Bros., Michael Jackson, Poison Ivy and sailors.

Ottawa's flu shots set to run dry by Monday

TRACEY TONG

Although a second shipment of 46,000 H1N1 vaccines arrived in Ottawa Wednesday night, the demand has been so high that Ottawa Public Health anticipates running through the supply by Sunday or Monday.

That means that the city will have gone through 83,500 doses in one week or less.

The good news: the city is hoping for a third shipment by Monday, said medical officer of health Dr. Isra Levy.

"We know that over time, the federal government has enough doses of the vaccine so that every Canadian who wants the vaccine will be able to get it," he said. "We also know that the vaccine is coming off the manufacturing lot at a certain rate, which means that not every Canadian who wants it can get it immediately."

In the meantime, people who are not in the highest risk groups are asked to hold off on seeking a vaccine, Levy said.

While residents with mild cases of the flu are asked to treat symptoms at home, patients coming to hospitals should limit the number of people accompanying them and be prepared to wait and be treated in a separate area, said Thomas Hayes, director for occupation health and emergency preparedness at the Ottawa Hospital.

Flu delays deadly: Libs

Nine million H1N1 vaccine doses arriving in coming days

The Liberals are taking the Harper government to task over its handling of the swine-flu vaccine, saying delays have cost lives.

Liberal MP Bob Rae asked Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq if she realized that people have died — and will die — because of delays in ordering and rolling out the vaccine.

"Does she not understand that these delays have cost, and will cost, lives?" Rae said Thursday.

Industry Minister Tony Clement answered the first two questions for Aglukkaq, telling the House of Commons that six million doses of vaccine will be delivered by Friday.

"By the end of next week, there will be an additional three million doses for a total of nine million doses for Canadians," Clement said.

But later, Rae again accused the Tories of foot-dragging. "There are people who, unfortunately, have succumbed to the disease," he said. "I think it's a reasonable thing to say that if they'd had the vaccine, it's quite possible their lives could have been saved."

Thousands of Canadians have already been vaccinat-

89 At least 89 Canadians have died from the H1N1 virus and more than 1,600 have been hospitalized.

ed since Aglukkaq approved a new H1N1 vaccine late last week — after other countries had already begun vaccinations.

But there have been long lineups, confusion and frustration across the country as people rush to get the vaccine.

Overwhelming demand for the swine-flu shot had the only two vaccination clinics operating in Toronto turning away people early Thursday afternoon. Children's hospitals in Toronto and Ottawa have been swamped recently as worried parents bring in their children over swine-flu concerns.

Officials have asked that only those in high-risk categories — adults with chronic health conditions, pregnant women, and children six months to under five years old — get vaccinated this week. But some lower-risk Canadians are trying to jump the queue.

Six seeking Gatineau mayoralty

Candidates present their positions before Sunday's municipal election

Jacques-Cartier Park into an animated tourist area.

• A city councillor since 1999 and former deputy mayor, Aurèle Desjardins said his priority would be to settle the outstanding contract disputes. A. Desjardins with police, fire and other city employees.

Gatineau also needs to step up and take its place as an equal partner in the long-term planning for the National Capital Region, he said.

• Tony Cannavino, a retired Sûreté du Québec officer and past president of the Canadian Police Association, wants to ensure high-quality local services are made available to all residents. Cannavino would also increase the contribution and expertise that Gatineau police provide to the regional task force to combat street gangs.

• For Gatineau to become a truly cosmopolitan city, retired teacher Roger Fleury said it must create a new "Centre-Ville" along the river between the Canadian Museum of Civilization and the Chaudière Bridge. This includes a shared transportation system between Ottawa and Gatineau to service a "Centre-Ville" and the rest of Gatineau using trains on existing rail beds and a light rail system.

• If elected, garage owner Luc Desjardins hopes to have voters going to the polls again within three months to elect officials to represent two new cities separated by the Gatineau River.

Desjardins said the amalgamation imposed on the region has created an unwieldy bureaucracy and needs to be refined.

- Richard Gravel is the director of the Association Régionale de Soccer de l'Outaouais and president of Vision Centre-Ville. A representative for Gravel said he was not interested in speaking with Metro.

Trick-or-Eaters seek donations

They may be older than your typical trick-or-treater, but that won't stop hundreds of university students from donning costumes and showing up on your doorstep this Saturday.

Students from the University of Ottawa and Carleton University will be going door-to-door for a good cause this Halloween.

But they're not asking for candy. They're looking for donations of non-perishable food to help Canadian families who struggle to put meals on the table.

Canada's largest youth food drive, Trick-or-Eat, will see over 6,000 students across the country collecting food for Meal Exchange, a national student-led charity that works to raise awareness of local hunger, said Alison Smith, the Meal Exchange co-coordinator at Carleton.

"A lot of people would be surprised that hunger is a problem in Ottawa," said Smith. "Ottawa is considered recession proof, but when you look at the numbers, it's just not true. There are people who are hungry and people who don't know where their next meals are coming from."

Here in the capital, about 40,000 people need some sort of food assistance each month, Smith said.

"And even more startling is about a third of food-aid recipients are children."

In 2008, students from both universities collected about 8,000 pounds of food, which went to the Ottawa Food Bank and food banks on each school's campus.

"It's a great way for students to get involved in the fight against local hunger and have fun at the same time. It's a great chance for them to help out," said Julie Brezden, Meal Exchange co-ordinator at the UOttawa food bank.

Nationwide, this year's goal is to collect 140,000 meals, and an extra $30,000 in online donations.

Judge throws book at war criminal

COURTS A Canadian judge has imposed the toughest sentence possible on a man convicted of committing atrocities during the 1994 Rwandan genocide, described as the worst possible crime a human being can commit.

In a historic case, Desire Munyaneza was sentenced Thursday to life imprisonment without possibility of parole for 25 years.

Quebec Superior Court Justice Andre Denis handed down the sentence in a case international legal observers followed closely because of the implications it could have on similar prosecutions both here and abroad.

He is the first person convicted under Canada's Crimes Against Humanity and War Crimes Act, enacted in 2000.

Ads not working: Poll

POLITICS A new poll suggests the Harper government's multimillion-dollar, taxpayer-funded ad blitz to promote its stimulus plan doesn't seem to be having the desired effect.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey also suggests most Canadians believe Liberal claims that stimulus spending favours Conservative ridings.

Less than a third of respondents to the poll said they were aware of any stimulus projects underway in their areas. A majority said they believed there's favouritism in the handing out of cash, but they didn't seem to be too concerned about it. The poll of just over 1,000 people was conducted Oct. 22-26.

CSIS talks on extremism, wants debate

Canada not immune, says chief

The head of Canada's spy agency says Canada is not immune from extremism but has not had a serious discussion about the threat of terrorism.

As a result, the public often sees young people charged with plotting violence as too naive to carry out such deadly acts, said Richard Fadden.

Speaking at a conference of academics and security officials in Ottawa Thursday, Fadden called for a more nuanced debate on the subject. Fadden inherited several thorny problems when he took over as director of the Canadian Intelligence Security Service, or CSIS, in late June.

The spy agency's cases against two terror suspects held on security certificates faltered when it failed to disclose important evidence. A third case collapsed because CSIS withdrew material it did not want to become public.

In July, the Security Intelligence Review Committee said CSIS might need to undergo major changes after finding it ignored concerns about human rights and the age of the suspect when it decided to interview Toronto-born teen Omar Khadr at a U.S. military prison.

The watchdog committee called for "guidance and advice" from Public Safety Minister Peter Van Loan to help the spy service meet legal and public demands in the post-Sept. 11, 2001, world.

At issue is the service's dealings with countries that do not always respect human rights and whether its relationship with them puts jailed Canadians and others at risk of abuse.

Three Canadians who were tortured in overseas prisons are suing the government over the role security agencies played in passing information to foreign police and intelligence officials.

In addition, the service's role in the case of Montrealer Abousfian Abdelrazik, who was stranded for years in Sudan, is being scrutinized by the spy agency's watchdog.

U.S. ambassador talks terrorism, trade and borders

POLITICS The new U.S. ambassador to Canada says he's confident the two countries can find a way to protect their borders without hampering free trade.

David Jacobson says protecting the United States and Canada from terrorist threats is a key priority.

Jacobson, who is on a tour of Canada after becoming ambassador earlier this month, plans to visit several U.S.-Canada border crossings tomorrow. But he says border security and efficiency isn't a zero-sum game, and while he understands Canada's concerns over Washington's Buy American policies, he is confident both sides can come to a solution.

Talks

- High-level discussions are ongoing and Jacobson says that while no deal has yet been reached, the talks have been constructive.

Warnings of monopoly

Hydro-Quebec purchases NB Power for $5B

ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hydro-Quebec would get the majority of NB Power's assets under a proposed agreement worth nearly $5 billion signed Thursday by New Brunswick Premier Shawn Graham and Quebec Premier Jean Charest.

The premiers of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland and Labrador have warned that the deal would give Hydro-Quebec a monopoly that could hinder other power development in the region.

But Graham says there will be opportunity for public debate before the closing date of the deal at the end of March 2010.

According to the memorandum of understanding, Hydro-Quebec would buy the assets for $4.75 billion — an amount equivalent to NB Power's debt — giving Quebec greater capacity to export power to the United States.

Those assets include transmission lines, offices and most generation facilities including the Point Lepreau nuclear power plant.

"This agreement ... will also provide Quebec with a strategic geographic position with regards to the markets of Atlantic Canada and New England," Charest said.

Graham lauded the benefits it would bring to his province.

"The elimination of NB

Power's massive debt will help us attain self-sufficiency and relieve our children and grandchildren of this burden," he said.

"Homeowners will see rates much lower than under the status quo, and we will now share Quebec's competitive industrial rates."

Radical's son held in Canada

Windsor arrest follows shootout

The son of the slain leader of a radical Detroit-area Islamic group was arrested in Canada on Thursday.

His capture came a day after the FBI arrested several members of the group and a raid at a suburban warehouse ended in gunfire.

The FBI asked for the public's help in catching two of the 11 suspects in the case still at large.

And they emphasized that the group, a faction of the radical U.S. Sunni Islamic group Ummah, held beliefs that were not at all representative of mainstream Islam.

"Any Muslim who took a look at what these people believed would not recognize this as the Muslim faith," said Andrew Arena, the head of the FBI in Detroit.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested Mujahid Carswell, the 30-year-old son of slain group

The Ummah file

- Ummah believes a separate Islamic state in the U.S. would be controlled by Jamil Abdullah Al-Amin, formerly known as H. Rap Brown, serving a life sentence for shooting two police officers.
- Al-Amin, a veteran of the black power movement, started the group after he converted to Islam in prison.

leader Luqman Ameen Abdullah, across the Detroit River in Windsor, where Carswell lived, the FBI said.

Abdullah, 53, was killed during a shootout Wednesday with federal agents.

He was one of 11 people named in a criminal complaint.

The charges included conspiracy to sell stolen goods and illegal possession and sale of firearms.

Lt. Justin Boyes, 26, was killed Wednesday. He was the 132nd Canadian to die.

Alanna Boyes said her husband had told her he was worried that some Canadians are undermining the military's efforts.

"Justin and I believe in the mission," she said Thursday.

Six Bandido bikers are convicted of massacre that stunned Canada

Forty-four first-degree murder convictions were returned against six men Thursday over the bloody internal cleansing of a Canadian Bandidos chapter.

Among the men was the outlaw biker who, the jury heard, masterminded the massacre — Wayne Kellestine.

Kellestine was found guilty of eight counts of first-degree murder after less than two days of jury deliberations in London, Ont.

After all eight counts were read out, Kellestine simply looked at his lawyer, Clay Powell, and raised his eyebrows.

Was Kellestine expecting the guilty verdicts?

"I think he was," Powell said outside the court.

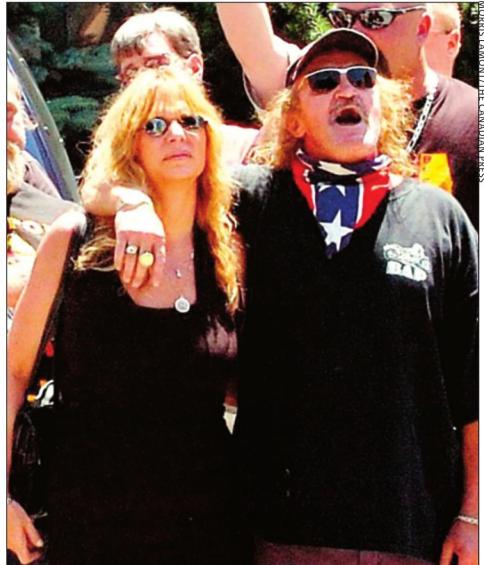

Eight men were shot dead and stuffed into four vehicles that were abandoned in southwestern Ontario in April, 2006.

The bodies were found just kilometres away from Kellestine's farmhouse.

During a six-month trial that heard from more than 70 witnesses, prosecutors argued that seven of the eight men were led out of Kellestine's barn and murdered, one by one.

It's believed to be Ontario's largest mass slaying.

Lawyers for Kellestine's co-accused branded him a mad man. The jury didn't

Along with Kellestine, they found Dwight Mushey and former police officer Michael Sandham guilty of eight counts of first-degree murder.

Marcelo Aravena and Frank Mather were each found guilty of one count of manslaughter and seven counts of first-degree murder.

Brett Gardiner was found guilty of two counts of manslaughter and six of first-degree murder.

First-degree murder carries an automatic life sentence with no chance of parole for 25 years.

Municipal elections can be a snooze

UrbanCompass

Steve Collins

metronews.ca/collins

Media speculation about who may or may not run for mayor next year — former mayor Bob Chiarelli is the latest possibility — seems a bit at odds with public interest in actually electing any of them.

Increasingly, it seems, voters can't be bothered to vote, and municipal elections in particular bear the brunt of this growing indifference.

Election authorities in Saskatchewan and Quebec launched campaigns effectively begging their citizens to shrug off their inaction and cast a ballot in this fall's civic elections. Jokey TV commercials in Quebec envisaged an election in which nobody voted, with abandoned polling stations, acres of potholes and brown goo for drinking water.

Still, Saskatchewan voters stayed home in legions this week. In Saskatoon, just 27 per cent of the electorate bothered showing up. In Regina, it was 24 per cent.

Quebec municipalities vote Sunday, and there is little reason to expect much better. One might think that allegations of corruption and bid-rigging in Montreal might have angry voters lining up at the booth to kick some ass, but widespread disgust and weariness, it is feared, will just further suppress turnout. Last time around, 35 per cent of Montrealers voted.

How does Ottawa stack up against this electoral malaise? Well, the good news is that in our last election, voter turnout was at a record high. The bad news is the actual number was 54.4 per cent. A little more than half of voters actually voting isn't much to crow about, but in the previous election, it was a pathetic 33 per cent.

Mayor Larry O'Brien famously said he fell asleep on his boat with a beer and woke up mayor. It appears much of the electorate had a similar experience.

The unruly crowds at Lansdowne Live open houses at least indicate that active citizenry isn't dead in the nation's capital, but you can be almost sure that these people already voted, and are pulling double and triple duty while the rest of us sleepwalk past the polls.

I don't advocate voting for voting's sake. If voting day is the only time you give any thought to who governs your city and how, then maybe you're better off not bothering. Passive apathy might do less harm than active ignorance.

I also won't repeat that old clanger about having no right to complain if you didn't vote. You have every right to complain. If you can find something to get mad about, you might even have the basis of an informed vote by the time the 2014 election rolls around.

Needles give some people high anxiety

Flu Outbreak

As Canadians roll up their sleeves for the H1N1 vaccination, there will likely be a few faces in the long line-ups cringing at the thought of what's to come — perhaps not the vaccine itself, but the delivery method.

Needles have been known to elicit tears and even fainting episodes among those queasy, anxious or fearful about being pricked. And experts say festering thoughts of potential imminent pain from a shot could weigh on some people's decisions about whether to get vaccinated in the first place.

"I think people may have concerns about vaccines for a variety of reasons, but pain and the actual fear of getting the injection is often the barrier that prevents people from getting the vaccine," said pediatric psychologist Christine Chambers, a Canada Research Chair in pain and child health, based at Dalhousie University and the IWK Health Centre in Halifax.

"Certainly people who are anxious in general are more likely to be fearful about other consequences and other side-effects that they see might be associated with the vaccine."

Five to 10 per cent of people will admit to not getting vaccinated because of pain, said Anna Taddio, an adjunct scientist and pharmacist at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children.

Evan Moore, 5, covers his mouth to avoid crying while getting a flu shot this week in Belleville, Ont.

Chambers and Taddio say there are strategies that can help effectively reduce pain as well as anxiety, particularly among young people.

Chambers recommends parents purchase a topical anesthetic cream that can significantly reduce pain. Taddio suggests applying a numbing cream 30 minutes beforehand — a cream that uses the same chemicals dentists use in patients' mouths.

For infants, breastfeeding during injections can help reduce pain. Distracting a child's attention away from pain could include talking to or giving small toys to babies and young kids, or bringing a small DVD player or iPod along.

Taddio said it's beneficial for children four and up to know about the needle beforehand because explaining what's going to happen will help to prepare them.

Clinton talks tough to Pakistan

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Thursday that Pakistan squandered opportunities over the years to kill or capture leaders of the al-Qaida terrorist network responsible for the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

While U.S. officials have said they believe Osama bin Laden and senior lieutenants have been hiding in the rugged terrain along the border with Afghanistan, Clinton's unusually blunt comments went further as she suggested that Pakistan's government has done too little to act against al-Qaida's top echelon.

"I find it hard to believe that nobody in your government knows where they are and couldn't get them if they really wanted to," Clinton told Pakistani journalists in Lahore. "Maybe that's the case. Maybe they're not gettable. I don't know."

With the country reeling from Wednesday's devastating bombing that killed at least 105 people in Peshawar, Clinton also engaged in an intense give-and-take with students at the Government College of Lahore. She insisted that inaction by the government would have ceded ground to terrorists.

"If you want to see your territory shrink, that's your choice," she said, adding that she believed it would be a bad choice.

Cash for kids in Argentina

POVERTY Argentina's President Cristina Fernandez decreed Thursday that Argentina will provide direct cash subsidies of about $50 a month per child to families whose parents are unemployed or work informally.

She said her antipoverty program will cost the social security system nearly 10 billion pesos — about $3 billion a year — money that will come from the public pension system that was nationalized last year.

According to the Argentine government, poverty fell to 13.9 per cent this year, compared to 17.8 per cent in mid-2008.

This conflicts with data gathered by the Catholic University of Argentina, which found that 44 per cent of households don't have enough income to pay for food, health care, clothing, taxes and services.

Passports possibly linked to 9-11 found

Pakistani soldiers battling their way into a Taliban stronghold along the Afghan border have seized passports that may be linked to 9-11 suspects, as they confront an enemy skilled in operating in a mountainous terrain with endless ways to wage a guerrilla war.

The military on Thursday took journalists for a first look inside the largely lawless territory since it launched a ground offensive here in mid-October.

The U.S.-backed operation is focused on a section of the tribal region where the Pakistani Taliban are based and are believed to shelter al-Qaida.

Soldiers displayed passports seized in the operation, among them a German document belonging to a man named Said Bahaji. That matches the name of a man thought to have been a member of the Hamburg cell that conceived the 9-11 attacks. Bahaji is believed to have fled Germany shortly before the attacks in New York and Washington.

The passport included a tourist visa for Pakistan and a stamp indicating he'd arrived in the southern city of Karachi on Sept. 4, 2001.

Another passport, from Spain, bears the name of Raquel Burgos Garcia. Spanish media have reported that a woman with the Everest College – Ottawa East now offers students a hands-on program in Esthetics that teaches students how to give facial and other body treatments using specialized products and techniques. Estheticians are typically found in health and wellness careers, but there are a growing number of positions in the health care field for these professionals. According to Service Canada, the number of estheticians and electrologists should increase sharply over the next few years mainly due to the demand for personal care services.

Estheticians' duties can vary from job to job. No matter the setting, their purpose is to help patients feel better by learning to care for the changes their bodies are experiencing. An esthetician working in a dermatology office might normally practice exfoliation and restorative techniques for patients suffering from skin or hair diseases. An esthetician working in a hospital may help burn victims learn to apply makeup to cover scarring, and an esthetician who works in an oncology center may help cancer patients learn to care for their sensitive skin after chemotherapy treatments.

According to Canadian Census data, in 2006 approximately 72% of estheticians and electrologists were working in the personal care services sector, which includes beauty parlours and hairstyling salons. The gained knowledge and skills of Everest College's program can prepare graduates for work as estheticians, spa owners, product demonstrators and more.

Some of the courses included in the program are: Introduction to Esthetics; Bacteriology, Sterilization and Sanitation; Cells, Anatomy and Physiology of the Skin; Disorders and Diseases of the Skin; Nutrition; Basic Chemistry; Cosmetic Ingredient and Product Analysis; Facials, Hair Removal, Manicures and Pedicures; Makeup Artistry; and Business Management.

At Everest College – Ottawa East, you can learn the ideas behind esthetics careers as well as how to apply them. German living in Brazil airport after being dumped

A German man reportedly dumped by a Brazilian woman he met on the Internet has been living in an airport for 13 days and isn't saying when he will leave.

The man, identified by authorities as Heinz Muller, is out of money, according to airport workers, some of whom bring him meals from the food court.

The 46-year-old former pilot passes the time wandering the airport in Campinas, an industrial city about an hour's drive from Sao Paulo, or using his laptop perched on a luggage cart. Occasionally he speaks to workers and passengers in basic Portuguese mixed with some Spanish.

Grounded

The case of Heinz Muller recalls that of Hiroshi Nohara, a Japanese man who spent three months living in the Mexico City airport before leaving last December.

Muller arrived in Rio de Janeiro on Oct. 2 and can stay as long as he breaks no laws, said a spokesman for Brazil's civil aviation authority.

Most European tourists are allowed to stay three months in Brazil, presumably giving Muller until early January before he would face deportation.

The spokesman also confirmed reports that Muller said he ended up at the airport after being dumped by a woman living nearby. He visited after meeting her on the Internet.

Muller washes himself in the airport bathrooms and sleeps on chairs in the airport's only terminal.

In a brief interview in English, he said that airport workers "are treating me OK" and that he wants to move permanently to Latin America's largest country.

"I want to be living in Brazil in somewhere pretty," he said, declining to elaborate after an Associated Press reporter would not buy him the computer cable he demanded in return for answering questions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Obama considered Clinton for VP, book says

POLITICS Barack Obama seriously considered Hillary Rodham Clinton for the vice-presidency, even though his top aides were not enthusiastic about it, his presidential campaign manager says in a new memoir.

"Neither Ax (top-level adviser David Axelrod) nor I were fans of the Hillary option," David Plouffe, who ran Obama's 2008 race, said in his memoir, portions of which were published by Time magazine Thursday.

Short list

Obama's final short list for running mates included:

- Sen. Joe Biden (who became vice-president)
- Sen. Evan Bayh of Indiana
- Gov. Tim Kaine of Virginia

more seriously about picking Hillary Clinton than Ax and I had realized," Plouffe wrote, describing a meeting the three had in early 2008 when it became clear Obama would be the Democratic candidate.

Plouffe also wrote that "we had initially received a lot of advice from many of (Clinton's) supporters to pick her, though this 'advice' was perhaps more accurately described as subtle pressure."

Recovery not creating jobs

Canada's slow climb out of a recession appears to be doing little to foster growth in the domestic job market so far.

Statistics Canada says the number of non-farm jobs in the country fell by 0.8 per cent in August from July, when it registered an increase. The results were pulled down by a drop in educational services jobs, though a lower number of hirings has been seen in many different sectors.

The agency reported that more than 70 per cent of industries surveyed posted losses, the largest number since last January. Other recent economic reports also question whether Canada's economy is poised for recovery this quarter.

A study by the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives says the economy is actually still in a recession, and any expectations of a quick rebound in the private sector are unfounded.

On the upside, a survey from the Ontario Trucking Association shows 71 per cent of Ontario trucking companies who responded believe Canada's economy has hit bottom.

South of the border, the American economy delivered its best growth in two years during the third quarter, climbing 3.5 per cent, but the momentum was drawn primarily from government subsidies.

Egyptian telecom company Orascom owns 65 per cent of Globalive, a structure accepted by Industry Canada when its licence was granted last March. However the CRTC says Orascom has the ongoing ability to determine Globalive's strategic decision-making activities.

The world's largest publicly traded oil company said yesterday that oil production is bouncing back with crude prices.

A worldwide glut in petroleum supplies may yet cool the latest surge in oil, squeezing refiners and keeping profits in oil patch well below their peak last year or even the past several years.

Exxon Mobil Corp. reported that profits from July to September dropped 68 per cent to $4.73 billion US, or 98 cents per share. The results were the best of the year so far, but they're less than a third of what Exxon earned in the same period of 2008, when crude prices spiked above $147 US a barrel.

Excluding the previous quarters this year, Exxon has not reported quarterly profits this low in at least the past four years.

CHEERS Beverage maker Cott Corp. reported a net profit for its third quarter yesterday, reversing a year-earlier loss through stringent cost control, optimized capital expenditures, and improved customer relations.

The world's third-largest soft drink producer, providing many retailers and grocers with store-branded products, said Thursday it made a profit of $13.9 million US or 18 cents per share in the quarter ended Sept. 26.

This was a significant improvement from a net loss of $87.6 million US or $1.25 per share a year ago.

Meanwhile the company, which keeps its books in U.S. dollars, said its quarterly revenue dipped to $404.9 million from $420.5 million a year ago but met analyst expectations.

Estimates compiled by Thompson Reuters predicted third-quarter revenue of $405 million and earnings per share of 16 cents per share. Cott noted that once the impact of foreign exchange was excluded, revenue for the quarter had increased by 1.1 per cent.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

The Toronto stock market closed above 11,000 on Thursday as investor relief over U.S. economic growth helped claw back losses racked up during a four-day tumble. The S&P/TSX composite index surged 269.9 points to 11,075.2 after the U.S. Commerce Department reported that the country's gross domestic product rose at a 3.5 per cent annualized pace during the July to September period, slightly better than the 3.3 per cent growth that economists had expected. It was the first time the economy has grown since early 2008. Growth was fuelled by government-supported spending on cars and homes and buoyed hopes that the worst U.S. recession since the 1930s has ended.

ning, who are 4-0-2 at home.

Stamkos put Tampa Bay ahead 1-0 at 7:20 of the first when his redirection of Vincent Lecavalier's shot appeared to go into the net off Ottawa defenceman Filip Kuba.

The second-year centre gave the Lightning a 4-0 lead at 7:09 of the third from the low right circle after a nifty stickhandling move.

Ottawa got third-period goals from Jarkko Ruutu and Alex Kovalev. The Senators were coming off a 4-3 win Wednesday at Florida.

Tanguay stopped a personal 12-game goal drought, dating to April 4, just over 2 minutes after Stamkos' second goal.

Fedoruk made it 2-0 on an in-close rebound goal at 4:34 of the second. Malone's wraparound goal extended Tampa Bay's advantage to 3-0 with 5:12 left in the second.

Loonie making a power play

Rising value of the Canadian dollar could mean good things for hockey in Canada

The call of the soaring loonie could help chart a northward migration path for NHL clubs.

Once an economic albatross blamed in part for the failures of the Winnipeg Jets and Quebec Nordiques, the ascending Canadian dollar is suddenly enriching Canadian-based clubs, single-handedly increasing NHL revenues and crafting a new financial argument for more NHL hockey in Canada.

"A host of southern U.S. cities might now be more likely to lose their NHL teams," said Andrew Zimbalist, an eminent sports economist based in Massachusetts who testified on behalf of Jim Balsillie in his recent failed bid to purchase and move the Phoenix Coyotes to Hamilton.

"Canada becomes that much more attractive."

Every three-cent jump in the value of the Canadian dollar triggers a 1 per cent revenue increase for the NHL, say league insiders.

Consider, then, the current windfall: The suddenly Herculean Canuck buck has vaulted more than 10 per cent over the past year, a surge that has dragged the economic fortunes of Canadian clubs with it.

One estimate puts the increase in league revenues at approximately $100 million as a result of the dollar jump in the past year.

Once burdened with having to pay players in U.S. dollars while collecting revenues in well-below-par Canadian dollars, Canada's six NHL teams are suddenly standing on a competitive fiscal playing surface flush with unexpected new wealth.

"If one can argue that venue A in Canada was superior to venue B in the sunbelt, that differential is bigger than it was before," Zimbalist said. "It also makes the clientele of Canadian clubs richer than they would otherwise be, which makes them more able to buy seats and beer and products advertised in the arenas."

The dollar's rise adds weight to the argument for more Canadian clubs, says NHL player agent Ritch Winter.

"Of course it makes a difference," he said. "You're talking about reducing your payroll costs significantly."

That said, sports franchises are more about ego than economic logic, said

"A host of southern U.S. cities might now be more likely to lose their NHL teams ... Canada becomes that much more attractive."

Andrew Zimbalist, economist

Rick Powers, dean of the Rotman School of Business at the University of Toronto.

"It's the old boys' club. And they don't care if they're making money. If it loses money, it's a tax writeoff. For the most part, it's big boys with their toys."

Before the start of the season, the league's economic forecast for this year was based on an 86 cent Canadian dollar, according to two senior club officials who asked not to be named. The loonie closed Thursday at 93.72 cents U.S.

After hosting 100 Series games, old Yankee Stadium sits in the shadows

BASEBALL As the No. 4 elevated train pulls into the 161st Street station in the Bronx, it passes by the original Yankee Stadium. Hardly a rider notices.

The home to exactly 100 World Series games and nine clinchers for the Yankees stands ignored, just across the street from its glitzy, new $1.5-billion US replacement.

"I did the first few times I came. I thought about it then," former New York mayor Rudy Giuliani said in an interview with The Associated Press before Game 1 of the Series. "Once I'm here, I don't anymore."

Destined to be taken down piece by piece, the 86-year-old Yankee Stadium is a shell of itself, wrapped in scaffolding, construction netting and a blue plywood wall at street level.

Take a sliver of a peek into the park from the 4 train, peer through a hole in the fence and you'll see the place has been stripped of its memories.

The nearly 56,000 blue seats are gone, leaving tiers of exposed concrete. The padding that covered the right-field wall where little Jeffrey Maier reached over and coaxed a flyball into a home run for Derek Jeter in the 1996 American League championship series is gone, too.

"It is sad when you think about everything that's gone on over there, but this is everything we had hoped for," Yankees veteran Andy Pettitte said.

Flame worth embracing

Critics missing the point behind Olympic torch relay

Field of Play

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

The Olympic flame is in Canada. The longest torch relay in history began Friday.

It's time for the dissent to stop and for us to be gracious hosts.

Incredibly, there are a significant number of people in this enlightened nation who don't get it. They complain about everything from the corporate greed embodied by the Games to the fact that the torch relay was first conducted in 1936 in Berlin, the so-called "Nazi Olympics."

These doubters also claim that the Olympics will somehow bankrupt our affluent country and that, "...the average Joe is being screwed by corporations and the government so they can have a party."

What gives?

The critics are missing the point.

Yes, the Olympics have become corrupted over time and often resemble a commercial enterprise instead of the universal movement of peace and understanding they were originally meant to be. But while it's true the Games have become, on occasion, an example of clubby excess, they do have a redeeming quality at their very foundation.

The Olympics are designed to celebrate the potential of youth and demonstrate the possibilities for harmony and co-existence. In short, they are an alternative to the strife and misunderstanding that pervades the planet most of the time.

Isn't that worth our allegiance — or at least an open mind as the torch relay in Canada begins?

One torchbearer and bank executive I talked to, who works for a competitor of the relay's title sponsor, summed up her motivation behind carrying the flame.

"It's a symbol of the Games and the values they represent," she told me. "It's about having a meaningful goal, commitment to discipline, community and sportsmanship. These are all worthy values I would hope to impart to my children."

Now that's why we should all embrace the flame.

It's because the torch represents hope that there is some goodness to be found when it reaches its destination in the Olympic city.

Eddie the Eagle will land back in Canada for torch relay

SKI JUMPER Eddie the Eagle is flying back to Canada.

Michael Edwards, the bespectacled, inexperienced and unorthodox ski jumper from England who became a fan favourite during the 1988 Calgary Winter Olympics, will carry the flame during the torch relay for the Vancouver Games.

Edwards is scheduled to carry the torch in Winnipeg in January, becoming one of 15 special international torchbearers, mostly athletes, who will be part of the relay.

He had been ski jumping for just two years when, at 24, he became the first British man to compete in the sport at the Olympics.

He was an instant hit, with crowds of fans chanting his name at events and at the closing ceremonies, even if no one was ever quite sure he'd land his jumps in one piece.

The way he told his story to reporters in 1988, it seemed surprisingly easy to become an Olympian.

"I just walked into their office and said: 'Hi, I'm Eddie Edwards from England. Can I have a go at jumping?'" he said at the time.

VANCOUVER 2010 Games

The flame for the 2010 Olympic Games has finally arrived home.

After an eight-day relay through coastal villages and mountain towns, Greek officials turned the flame over to Vancouver Olympic organizers in a ceremony Thursday night that included a trace of scandal over the Greek's decision to allow a disgraced hurdler to carry the torch.

The flame was handed to John Furlong, chief executive officer of the Vancouver Games' organizing committee, who noted the handover marks the beginning of the 106-day relay through Canada.

"As the flame travels across Canada's vast landscape, it will shed a light on the people, places and the achievements of our country," he said.

Jeff Bridges channels '60s experience in black comedy

ANN BRODIE
for Metro CanadaMovie feature

Jeff Bridges is the kind of guy you'd like for a friend. He's affable and honest, and completely unspoiled by the Hollywood successes of his father Lloyd and his own considerable clout.

In fact, he's really just a sensitive guy — still in love with his wife, Susie, after three decades of marriage.

"We've been married 33 years, and it just keeps getting better, more intimate, sexier, and you want to keep that going, you don't want to mess with that, you want to keep it constant," says the former teen heartthrob.

Bridges is currently starring in the black comedy The Men Who Stare at Goats, a sharp look at U.S.

paranormal military experiments begun during the Vietnam War — and which he says may still be in use.

Bridges' character formulates Project Jedi, a New Age soldiers' initiative, with the full blessing of the military.

"I got to talk to Lt. Colonel Jim Channon, the guy who my character is based on, who is still very much into this thing," says Bridges.

"If you go to his website, First Earth Battalion you can see what he's up to and it's basically it's the same stuff."

According to Channon's site "Project Jedi was ... undertaken by the US military in the late 1970s to create a super soldier that would possess superior strength, intelligence, cunning, intuition."

Bridges says he asked Channon if he felt the film made a mockery of his experiments and his life.

"He said 'No, I just want people to come to my website, people who are going to get it are going to get it. People who are going to pooh-pooh it are going to pooh-pooh it, but the people who have a little bit of curiosity, and are really going to get it. That's what I'm looking for. Those are the people I'm trying to attract."

FEATURE Filmmaker Robert Zemeckis may have worked with the likes of Meryl Streep and Tom Hanks but the actor who really bowled him over making his latest film was none other than Jim Carrey.

"He's pretty amazing," said Zemeckis during a recent interview. "He works so incredibly hard and he never stops so you come away with hours of all-wonderful, usable material."

The hardest part that a filmmaker has is deciding what not to put in (the film)."

It's perhaps even more to Carrey's credit that Zemeckis happened to hire the Canadian funnyman to portray no less than seven characters in the director's re-telling of Charles Dickens' holiday masterpiece, A Christmas Carol.

"From day one, the idea was that if Jim was interested in doing this, I think he should play Scrooge not just at different ages but also the ghosts because I figure when you've got an actor whose as versatile as that, why not?"

Besides, as the Oscar-winning director of Forrest Gump pointed out, versatility is of the utmost im-found in character."

However, A Christmas Carol adds a technical twist too. There are no sets and no costumes. Utilizing the same motion-capture wizardry he crafted with 2004's The Polar Express, Zemeckis is instead strapped Carrey with sensors that recorded his slightest motions. From there, the actor's performance is re-animated in the fantastical world of Dickens' classic where Scrooge learns the lessons of his own discontent.

"The whole story is wonderful because it represents a very universal story of redemption," said Zemeckis.

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Coco Avant Chanel is a prestige picture from France being trotted out for Oscar attention. The movie hits many of the Academy's sweet spots: It's a period piece, a biopic, and a movie about female independence.

Awards attention is inevitable but whether or not it is deserved is another matter. Coco Avant Chanel is a decent telling of the early days of fashion icon Gabrielle "Coco" Chanel.

The film picks up with Coco in her 20s trying to become a singer in sleazy French nightclubs. Coco is determined not to fall into a life of servitude to a man, but sadly seems to have no alternative. She ends up living with an absurdly rich aristocrat and scoffs at his wasteful lifestyle.

Coco Avant Chanel, starring Audrey Tautou, chronicles the early days of the fashion icon.

She starts wearing more masculine clothing to the chagrin of upper-class Parisians, who soon start copying her style. Then she falls in love with a handsome young Englishman who she can never have. In the end, she chooses independence purely because she can't be with the man she loves.

This seems like an awkward way to present a character that is supposed to be an early symbol of female independence. Coco decides to go out on her own purely because her two attempts at finding a male companion failed.

This muddled message aside, the movie is gorgeously made. Director Anne Fontaine vividly recreates turn of the century France and gracefully spins her yarn through painterly cinematography.

Audrey Tautou excels as Coco.

For Broncos writers, it's all in the family

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

FEATURE Married writing partners Jared and Jerusha Hess have a nifty system down for when they're working on a script: When a new scene works really well, they celebrate with a make-out session. Of course, deciding when they've earned one isn't always easy.

"Every time something good is written, he's like, 'Hey baby,' Jerusha says. Jared counters, "But she's like, 'That was not good enough.'

After their breakout debut, Napoleon Dynamite, the Hesses hit Hollywood, teaming with Jack Black for Nacho Libre. Their latest film, Gentlemen Broncos, brings them back to their native Utah — where they filmed Napoleon — and the type of oddball characters that made them famous.

This time around it's Benjamin (Michael Angarano), a mild-mannered science fiction buff who has his first novel stolen by his idol, pompous sci-fi novelist Ronald Chevalier (Jemaine Clement).

Sure, but what about that title?

"My mom had this really weird parenting book when I was growing up called, like, So You Want to Raise a Boy, written in the '50s," Jared explains. "There's a chapter that talks about the age from 16 to 17, and they often refer to it as the 'gentleman bronco' phase of life, where teenage boys like to take their shirts off and mow the lawn."

"I think (Jerusha) can predict just about every single dumb idea that I bring to the table."

Jared Hess

Benjamin was easy to connect with, Jared admits.

"A lot of the things that happen to Benjamin in the film happened to me," he says. "Well, except the plagiarism." But Benjamin's love of sci-fi wasn't hard to channel.

"I'm a big sci-fi fan," Jared says. "I actually really wanted to be a special effects dude working for Industrial Light and Magic or something. A lot of my first movies were really lame."

Working with a spouse has its advantages, of course — and its drawbacks. "I can't predict what she's going to say," Jared explains. "But I think she can predict just about every single dumb idea that I bring to the table."

For Jerusha, it feels natural to step back after the script stage and let Jared take over as director. "I'm so fine with him being the director," she says.

"I love having my little stamp on it at the beginning, but he's such a great director. I trust him completely" But that doesn't mean she won't have suggestions during production. "I'm not even on set the whole time," she explains. "But when I am I often whisper in his ear."

"When I'm about to do something real dumb," Jared finishes for her.

Twin sisters mourn the loss of love on new album Sainthood and her own relationship troubles.

"It's almost like a death," she says of her break up. "There's also the disappointment in the idea of the societal implications around a failure of a relationship. When do you become a weird spinster?"

Some of these thoughts wind up on the duo's new disc of infectious power pop tunes, but most of the tracks deal with the pain of a dissolving relationship — lies, deception, questioning and despair. It's not very upbeat stuff.

Still, Quin's optimistic about her chances for ever lasting love. "Anyone can stay in one relationship. With practice and time you can spend whole life with someone and be satisfied," she says. "Maybe it's less that there is the one or is this the one. We're wired and chemically driven to find that again and again."

Even when a relationship sours, though, Tegan has her twin sister to fall back on and vice versa. They seem to play up a sibling rivalry in the press, but you can't hole up in a New Orleans rehearsal space with someone and write music if you're not extremely fond of them.

"We just rented a space, just the two of us. We were literally in one room together for five days," Quin recalls. "It was good, but boring. It was like, your guitar sounds good, it's my turn."

Those songs didn't wind up on Sainthood, though

Quin expects them to be released at some point down the road. It did mark the first time, she says, that her and her sister wrote together. They kept that up when they started to lay down tracks for the new disc.

"We've always done variations of what some people consider writing," she

"There's also the disappointment in the idea of the societal implications around a failure of a relationship." Tegan explains. "But this record we actually sat down and wrote songs together. We also wrote music that we sent to each other over e-mail to finish."

Clearly, the sometimes-clashing sisters got a long well during Sainthood's writing process. But, like any couple they fought. The difference between them and the relationships they write about, though, is that Tegan and Sara always get back together.

"Two or three times a year we scream at each other hysterically," she says. "It feels safer when Sara and I are doing it though. No matter what happens one of us will have to come back."

The return of Creed

Seminal '90s rock band reunites and stages comeback

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

It's never a good sign when a band's frontman finds out that he's no longer employed from watching TV. That's what happened to Scott Stapp, lead singer of the seminal '90s rock band Creed.

"Someone called and wanted to do an interview," he says, about his band's break up. "About what?" I asked. The reporter told me to turn on the TV. That's how I learned about it. Seeing it live."

It was a rude awakening for the gruff-voiced vocalist, but one he needed. At the time — the end of 2004 — he was hooked on the anti-inflammatory drug Prednisone, which started affecting his life.

"Long-term use of that stuff can make you temporarily insane, gain weight and become crazy," he reveals. "And that's what happened."

It took about two years until he finally cleaned himself up — though he was arrested in 2007 for aggravated assault — but it took even longer to repair the damage with his bandmates.

Stapp hadn't spoken to anyone in the group for four years. In 2008 mutual friends opened the lines of communication between the singer and his guitarist and long time friend Mark Tremonti. Eventually, Stapp met with Tremonti's manager who arranged a meeting between the two. Soon enough they were writing together again.

"He could see his friend was back," says Stapp. "He could see it in my eyes. We said sorry, and within an hour we were on the couch sharing ideas and playing acoustic guitar."

Naturally, the songs that appear on Full Circle, the group's first record since 2001, deal with the inter-band turmoil and the struggles Stapp has had to overcome.

"This album completely defines and describes the emotions of my journey from six years ago to today," he explains. "To me the record is one big story."

While the group is still working out their issues ("it may never be how it used to be," says Stapp.)

It's clear from the album that the band is rejuvenated. They still stick to their Pearl Jam-lite formula — brash, meaty riffs, deep and growly vocals and soft overwrought ballads — but the songs emit a passion that's always lacked on their older material.

Even Stapp can feel the difference. "There's a more powerful delivery and a clear identity that reflects true nature of the band," he says.

Despite the stronger sound, it's still unclear if the popularity they had pre-break up — they sold millions upon millions of albums — would stick with them today. So far they've had trouble selling tickets to some of their shows, and the buzz hasn't been all that loud. But a new record could change that. Either way Stapp says he doesn't care if the band's selling power has waned.

Creed broke up in 2004, but the band is now back together and plugging the new album Full Circle.

"We never had those expectations before. We never said let's sell 30 million albums and we don't now," he says. "We just want to write the best album, top to bottom, we could. That's why we're a rock band."

Wi-Fi is coming to your car

Vehicles set to become rolling hotspots, but beware of distracted drivers

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

Now that talking and texting on your cell while driving is a felonious act in Ontario as of this week, discussion has turned to the various things that distract drivers.

While I personally agree that hands-free is the way to go for mobiles and that no one in their right mind would text behind the wheel, you know what the Nanny State can be like. The natural inclination of regulators is to regulate.

Radios with dozens of presets accessible only through tiny little buttons can't be safe. Satellite radio? It all depends on the receiver. I'm surprised there hasn't been a ban on CD players given all the fumbling that can go on with the jewel case and trying to find the track you want. Six-pack CD changes are at least six times more dangerous. Newer models have multi-gigabyte hard drives capable of holding thousands of songs; try doing a song search at 100 km/h. I once drove an Audi with an awesome dashboard satellite radio system and I spent more time looking at the gorgeous screen whilst flipping through channels than I did on the car in front me. And even when we get a seamless and foolproof way of integrating our iPods into our dashboards, they're going to cause problems.

Don't get me wrong. I love all this convenient gadgetry. I just worry about The Other Guy. And it's about to get a whole lot worse. Welcome to Wi-Fi on wheels.

Chrysler was one of the first to offer the option of turning their vehicles into rolling Wi-Fi hotspots. Now GM is offering Wi-Fi for its full line of vehicles. A system made by Autonet Mobile creates a Wi-

Fi cloud that extends up to 150 feet. That means not only will the kids in the back seat have access, but so will the guy two lanes over who will inevitably bob and weave so he can maintain his laptop connection. Best encrypt it fast.

WiFi will also make it possible to literally surf for tens of thousands of online radio stations and music surfaces. Want to listen to that punk rock netcaster from France while driving on the Trans-Canada between Brandon and Regina? No problem. Your Pandora or Last.fm stream? Piece of cake.

Imagine how this may impact traditional radio. I'm distracted already.

It's V for Visitors as sci-fi remake debuts

AMBER RAY
Metro World News

Humans don't seem to have any problem with space invaders. In fact, considering the success of District 9, we seem to love the idea of a bunch of aliens hovering over our major cities.

That's exactly what the team behind V is banking on. Adapted from the popular sci-fi miniseries that originally aired on NBC in 1983, the new V is a weekly series chronicling the arrival of aliens (a.k.a. Visitors).

It closely follows the plot of its predecessor: The Visitors first make contact by flying giant spacecraft over the world's metropolitan areas.

Their beautiful, poised leader, Anna (Morena Baccarin), relays their need to replenish their water supply, and in exchange they offer humans their advanced technology. And, of course, they "come in peace."

"We made sure that we honoured and respected the characters and the themes that (the original) envisioned, and introduced brand new characters and brand new themes that would make sense in a post-9/11 world," says Scott Peters, creator of the update.

The themes of fear and paranoia play out differently in 2009, and tapping into those sentiments meant reflecting on the identity of the modern "enemy."

"The original series, to me, felt very much like a military show — there was a very clear and present enemy," says executive producer Jeffrey Bell. "And post-9/11 ... there is no other single threat. It's terrorists, and it's the guy across the street or the woman next door."

"(In V) we have humans, and we have humans who are traitors, and we have visitors who have a nefarious agenda, and we have visitors who are heroes."

"And so not knowing who or what someone is (reflects) the paranoia that we all experience, living in a world where we wake up every day and everything is at an orange alert."

Terror on the tube: Halloween lineups

There are plenty of chills and cheese on TV leading up to Halloween tomorrow, with themed episodes and macabre movie marathons.

Those looking for laughs can tune into SNL Presents the Best of Halloween's Past on Global on Saturday.

Series television gets into the spirit as well, with CTV's Ghost Whisperer and Medium both referencing horror film classics on Friday's episodes. The mythical headless horseman from The Legend of Sleepy Hollow haunts Melinda on Ghost Whisperer, while Medium's Allison has vivid nightmares that insert her into scenes from Night of the Living Dead.

Movies on tap include CTV's high-definition broadcast of The Rocky Horror Picture Show, the campy classic has been digitally remastered just in time for Halloween on Saturday. The outrageous 1975 musical begins as a young couple, Brad (Barry Bostwick) and Janet (Susan Sarandon) are stranded at the home of the mad scientist Dr. Frank-N-Furter (Tim Curry).

A bizarre group of singing and dancing underlings get under your skin with memorable songs like Time Warp and Sweet Transvestite.

The kitschy fun is followed on CTV by The Mothman Prophecies, in which Richard Gere plays a journalist distraught by the sudden, tragic death of his wife. He Tim Curry finds himself mysteriously drawn to a small town where residents are beset by sightings of a creepy "moth-like" entity.

Meanwhile, Space has the 2003 remake of The Texas Chainsaw Massacre — with Jessica Biel starring as one of several friends hunted down by a deformed killer with a chain-

Elizabeth Mitchell, who plays an FBI agent trying to learn the Visitors' true motives, remembers watching the original miniseries with her parents. "I liked the escape of it," she says, adding she hopes families will also watch the new V together: "It's something that kids don't do as much anymore."

Scott Wolf plays a TV journalist chosen by the Visitors to do an exclusive interview with their leader, which offers a chance to advance his career. "Part of the fun of seeing how the character develops will be that relationship between his ambition and his journalistic integrity," says Wolf.

1 New Moon OST

ALBUM The Twilight franchise is finally showing some teeth, thanks to a dose of indie blood. The soundtrack features big names like Death Cab For Cutie and Thom Yorke, and more obscure ones such as Lykke Li. It's all brooding, heartbreak stuff and may well bring many vampire-resistant young ones to the New Moon pack. Standout tracks: A White Demon Love Song (The Killers) and Slow Life (Grizzly Bear).

2 The Men Who Stare At Goats

FILM Yes, George Clooney is one of the guys who can kill goats by just staring at them. In the tradition of Dr. Strangelove, the film is a send-up of all things war and military — in this case, the absurdity arises from a secret army op where psychic soldiers are trained to become "Warrior Monks." Also starring Jeff Bridges, Ewan McGregor and Kevin Spacey.

Bowie bio illuminating

BookReview

The Laughing Gnome, that seems to channel Alvin and the Chipmunks.

Nothing in particular sticks until he records the 1969 single Space Oddity. Bowie later goes all-in with his pioneering glam character Ziggy, the one with the screwed up eyes and snow-white tan. Bowie never looks back, never stops changing.

Spitz, a music journalist, does a decent job of tracking Bowie's evolution through copious research and interviews with dozens of people who knew him.

But be warned: Spitz is not big on narrative and crafting scenes. Events are recounted through gushy quotes from chums. Worse, Spitz has the habit of interrupting Bowie's story with vignettes about his own story. Who cares?

The result: A book both interesting and irritating.

MUSIC David Bowie knows what he's singing about when he performs Changes.

After making a big splash in the early 1970s as Ziggy Stardust, he went on to become the Thin White Duke, an art-sy Berlin angst rocker, the "straight" Bowie of Let's Dance and more recently the distinguished rock elder who goes to fashion events with his model wife, Iman.

The career full of characters obscures the less fantastic, but very interesting, back story of David Jones, a British teen in the 1960s who desperately wanted to make it big.

He joins some R&B bands, dabbles in acting and mime, changes his last name to Bowie and records a painful-to-listen-to single,

No school, no trust fund, Slumdog child stars told

The two child stars of Slumdog Millionaire are at risk of losing their monthly stipend and their trust fund if they don't start attending school, a trustee for the fund said Thursday.

Azharuddin Mohammed Ismail, 11, is only showing up at school 37 per cent of the time and Rubina Ali, 9, has only a 27 per cent attendance rate, the trustee said.

"It's pathetic," said Noshir Dadrawala, who helps administer the Jai Ho trust established by the filmmakers to provide an education, living allowance and housing for the young stars, who grew up in Mumbai's real-life slums.

Dadrawala blamed the children's busy schedule for their chronic truancy.

The filmmakers have declined to reveal the amount in the trust for fear of exposing the families to exploitation.

Azhar's mother, Shameen Ismail, said her son had been truant over the past two months because he was inconsolable after his father died in September from tuberculosis.

"He would cry often, so I kept him home from school for a while," she said.

She promised his attendance would improve.

Gosselin shows regret

SALVATION Embattled reality star Jon Gosselin admits he got "carried away by the challenges of fame" and is consulting with a rabbi to "reconnect with my deeper, more spiritual, more altruistic self," usmagazine.com reports.

In a statement, the father of eight, 32, tells the website, "I am troubled to learn that the media has accepted as true the scurrilous rumour that I would appear in a reality television program with Nadya Suleman. This is utterly false.

"I do, however, accept that some of my previous actions have in some way lent credence to such outrageous stories.

"I further accept that I have allowed myself to become somewhat severed from my own moral anchor and be carried away by the challenges of fame.

"It is for this reason that I have endeavored of late to reconnect with my deeper, more spiritual, more altruistic self with regular study sessions and counseling with Rabbi Shmuley Boteach, whose morality-centered-and-values-based advice, coupled with his profound commitment to fatherhood and family, I deeply respect."

Gosselin says he has agreed to a forum at New York's West Side Synagogue this Sunday where he intends to publicly apologize in a sacred space to those whom he has hurt.
